

In Remembrance of the Victims of Hostage Crisis in Manila 23/8/2010

Shocked, was what I felt when I watched the news. Rage, was what I experienced after watching the news. It was a tragic incident in the Philippine capital. Eight tourists from Hong Kong were killed in a bus siege, I guess almost of all you have watched the TV news unless you ignored all the media these days. I was furious when I was watching the news. The so-called S.W.A.T.(Special Weapons And Tactics) really broadened my horizon! With the worst plan, the worst skills, and the worst equipment. I was really "amazed". This SWAT which has been criticised by nations , which also have it , has left me at a complete loss for words. Their actions were not professional , not a bit.

"Bus Driver : All Hostages Killed" I nearly bursted into tears. It was even more heartbreaking as they are Hong Kongers. I could not wipe, however, I didn't have the appetite to continue to eat. Their silly actions were simply a comedy. I guess we all HKers condemn their SWAT and The Philippines' president, Benigno Aquino who was so arrogant and shifted all the blames to the media. I wouldn't believe he is The Philippines' president

I think their S.W.A.T. should be(Shooting Without A Target) or (Sorry. We Aren't Trained)
